This unique individual has been an inspiration to all of us for scholastic achievement. In the classroom her knowledge has enriched our minds and motivated us to search for higher goals. Her wise judgement and unfailing kindness have encouraged us to seek her guidance in personal as well as academic problems. To one who has given her time to direct, encourage, and serve the students of LHS, we proudly dedicate the 1969 CIRCLE to Mrs. Rena Cheek Bland.

Advisory council, administration work towards

Mr. Riggan has worked with the local advisory committee to make this school year a profitable one for all LHS students. Although we are unable to present a picture of the committee in this yearbook, the members are: Mr. L.H. Hasty, chairman; Mrs. Bland B. Pruitt, Mrs. Charles Loan, Mr. Wilton B. Perry, and Mr. James Grady.

Mr. Thomas A. Riggan
Principal

To the seniors of LHS may I say to you, "Congratulations", on your twelve successful years of educational learning. You have prepared yourselves for the future, and it is our hope and prayer that you will continue your education in some way. Set a goal for yourself and reach it, even though you may have to work hard. The road to success is never easy. We must all start at the bottom and work our way up. This can be done. Always remember to be of good character and make your school, community, and parents proud of you. As your principal for this, my first year, may I say that I have enjoyed being a part of your last year here at LHS. If I can assist you in any way, I will always be available. May you have God's speed.

Mrs. Williamson helps students select books for enjoyment and for the preparation of special projects.

Two guidance counselors aid college-bound students. Here Mrs. Hobgood and senior Phillip Robertson examine a college bulletin.

secretary simplify life for students

Two interested counselors are ready and willing to listen to any problems students may have and try to help solve them. The guidance department also sends transcripts to colleges when requested to do so by seniors. They also keep follow-up records on graduated students or those that have left and the cumulative records of students now in school. The department has available information about colleges and schools of higher learning. The secretary helps students follow rules and regulations. She is available if a student needs her, although she has officially no connection with the students. The librarian helps students in their selection of books, both for spare-time reading and for special projects. She checks books in and out, with the aid of assistants, and processes new books.

Sorting the car keys of students is one of Mrs. Ivey's daily duties.

English

Mrs. Bland begins her English lecture.

In the freshmen English course there is a thorough study of the fundamentals of grammar and punctuation, and the writing of short themes is introduced. Literature includes short stories, drama, poetry, and short nonfiction. Romeo and Juliet and Great Expectations are the major works. Tenth grade English reviews grammar and delves more deeply into the study of poetry. Julius Caesar and Silas Marner are read. American literature is the primary objective of English in the eleventh grade. English IV is designed for the student preparing for college as well as for the person whose formal education will terminate after high school. Literature is basically British, from the very beginning to the modern era, MacBeth being the primary piece.

Mrs. Conway teaches Bill Davis and Buddy Wheless to use language lab.

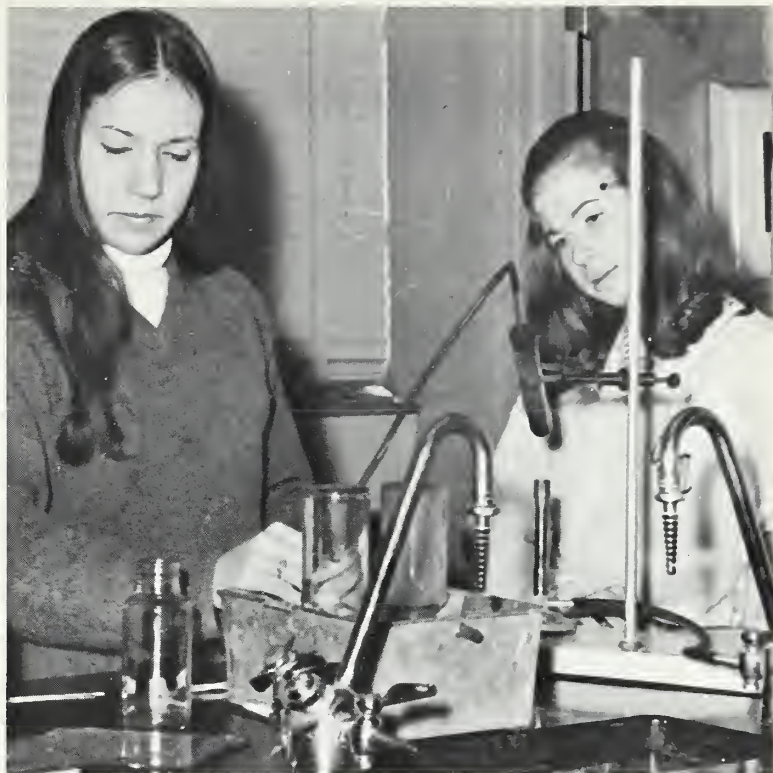

French

French I emphasizes practice in listening, oral comprehension, correct spelling and grammatical accuracy, conversation, and thinking in French. The student of second year French strives to attain correct pronunciation, reading with sense, oral conversation about daily life, and writing in French. French III includes a cultural background, a contemporary view of Paris, a review of grammar, and extensive vocabulary--all bound into nine issues of a "magazine" for the high school student.

Science

General biology is a survey course of biology with a modern approach on the nature and continuity of life, the biology of man, and ecological relationships. Physical science treats of our earthly home and its relationship in the universe. It also includes general topics such as geology, meteorology, light, sound, work and energy, and chemistry. The study of chemistry helps students to develop an understanding of facts as presently known and the concepts and principles based on such facts. Students are offered the opportunity to gain firsthand information about materials and processes in the laboratory. A final objective of the course is to develop the ability and skill to use facts in thinking about substances and situations; in daily life, in industry, etc.

Chemistry students gain knowledge from class study and experimentation.

Mathematics

Mr. Conway explains the solution of a mathematical problem.

The geometry course is devoted mainly to plane geometry with phases of solid geometry and plane coordinate geometry. Using a broad approach, the curriculum includes: the metric postulates, mathematical descriptions, clarity and accuracy of language, the language of congruence, and word problems. Business problems, fundamental operations, and mental arithmetic are three distinct types of subject matter offered in business mathematics. Algebra I reviews basic arithmetic and set theory. The negative numbers and algebraic operations using negative numbers are introduced. After attaining an understanding of such basic operations, students go on to solving linear equations, systems, and word problems. Algebra II reviews concepts from Algebra I, and introduces quadratic functions and systems. The study of logarithms as a method of calculating is explored. Advanced math reviews algebraic concepts in preparation for college algebra. Basic trigonometry concepts as related to the right triangle are studied.

Vocational

Home economic students learn economy through practical application of their sewing skills.

Agriculture is related to the farm community. Trades and Industries is a course of supervised training for different trades such as bricklaying, carpentry, and mechanics. Drafting students draw architectural views of buildings, and plan front right sides of objects. Students taking ICT learn a trade by working in local business establishments each afternoon. They are in school until 12:30, and take four other subjects. Through the study of the varied aspects of home economics, many girls learn the value of experience in home life. Future homemakers acquire skills in home management, wardrobe and budget planning, nutrition and child care. In addition, they learn the management of resources — time, energy, and money — as well as the techniques of housekeeping.

Business

Typing I teaches beginning typing for business students and typing for personal use. Typing II delves deeper into proper typing of all business forms and stresses office etiquette. Another course teaches shorthand to be used in the office later. Bookkeeping stimulates an interest in becoming a certified public accountant or qualifies a student to do certain types of record keeping. General business pertains to credit and general living (banking, writing checks), and Business English is similar to required English, but it concentrates on business terms.

Typing students like Marilyn Smith strive to attain maximum speed with minimum errors.

Physical Education

Physical education classes teach freshman boys primarily physical culture and game fundamentals. Required P.E. classes for ninth-grade girls alternate health classes with physical activity. Skills of physical activity and of sports are emphasized. Advanced P.E. students learn basic rules of games so they may teach others or use them as a lifetime sport.

Classes in physical education provide girls with a means to improve fundamental skills and develop good sportsmanship.

Social Studies

Mr. Pitzer works diligently at his desk grading test papers "after hours."

World history, usually acquired in the tenth grade, is a survey of the progress of man through the ages, with an emphasis on art, world religion, and geographic influences on history. A junior requirement is a study of personalities, events, and social conditions that have shaped America in the past, present, and will in the future. Civics pertains to the make-up of our government and its functions. Sociology and economics deals with relationships between people, and how their behavior traits affect everyday lives.

Class of 1969 experiences rewarding year

As their final year at LHS sped by, seniors began to look forward to graduation as the culmination of four exciting, work-filled years. Moving at a hectic pace, they prepared for that time.

Seniors surveyed job opportunities, took College Board exams, sought admission to colleges, applied for scholarships, and attended athletic events. They participated in Student Council work, assisted with CIRCLE and SCHOOL DAZE publications, played in varsity sports, and took part in club activities. As graduation approached, seniors realized with feelings of happiness and regret that their high school days had ended. They stood on the threshold of a new adventure, recalling happy memories of life at LHS.

Juniors plan for future leadership

The Class of 1960 entered their junior year full of confidence and ready to face new responsibilities. Many juniors participated in varsity and junior varsity football, varsity and junior varsity basketball, golf, and baseball. Juniors were members of more than a dozen organizations, and took more than fifteen courses, including such new courses as Trades and Industries, Agriculture, Economics and Sociology, and Business English.

Through the endeavors of 1969, juniors prepared themselves for the unique challenges which will confront them in 1970, their final year at LHS.

Sophomores meet new responsibilities

The Class of 1971, full of joy at no longer being considered the "babies" of high school, began their sophomore year with the usual eagerness.

Showing their individual talents, sophomores participated in LHS sports and many other activities. They found themselves faced with more difficult schoolwork, but overcame that obstacle with ease.

As the year progressed, the sophomores found themselves growing older and wiser. As the year closes, the sophomores can look back on this rewarding high school year with the assurance that it was one of the best.

Freshmen adapt to LHS routine

The new atmosphere of high school did not hinder the Class of 1972 from quickly becoming a part of the many activities open to them. The interests of freshmen found many outlets. Various clubs, service organizations, and committees aided freshmen in greater school participation. Throughout the year, they learned to co-ordinate the varied duties of study, athletics, and activities.

The Class of 1972 anticipates an equally successful sophomore year.

FEATURES . . . Committee selects students to Louisburg High School experienced astounding growth in this school year. We accepted the challenge of changing times, abandoned old traditions, and established new precedents.

The local advisory council answered our call for help and set up certain criteria for selecting outstanding seniors. Character, leadership, scholarship, and service — these were the qualities of nine Louisburg High School students chosen by the advisory committee to receive the title of outstanding seniors.

Not only are these young men and women geared to one specific field of endeavor, but are outstanding in every aspect of high school life.

It was decided by the committee that the chief marshal, Student Council president, senior class president, editor of the SCHOOL DAZE, and editor of the CIRCLE all possessed the qualities to confirm them as outstanding seniors. The advisory committee may select any other seniors whom they feel possess outstanding qualities.

The Circle spotlights Thomas Finch

"Winning is not everything, but wanting to is." No one in Louisburg High School's history has wanted to win more than Thomas Finch. Playing football for four years with a losing team, Thomas struggled relentlessly to gain honor for himself and his school.

Thomas began his career as a freshman starter for the football team. He played every position except center and quarterback. Following in this style, he became All-Conference in his Sophomore and Junior years. He received added recognition by becoming All-East in his Junior year.

In basketball he was also in the spotlight. In his Junior year, he was Second Team All-Conference. In baseball, he became outstanding all over the field.

No honor can be denied a person who works hard enough, and Thomas never stopped trying. Although injured in the third game of the 1968 season, he made All-Conference and All-East end and linebacker. After surgery, he played basketball and baseball.

As a final tribute to Thomas, Number 72 was retired to the athletic trophy case, never again to be worn by a football player at LHS.

We the students of Louisburg High School, recognize Thomas Finch as an outstanding part of our world.

Weeks of preparation and dedication were climaxed Friday, May 10, by the Junior-Senior Prom. "Moonlight and Roses" was the theme which was evidenced by the decorations adorning the auditorium of Louisburg High School. An outdoor garden was depicted, and the feeling of spring was colorfully brought forth. There were rose hedges, fountains, picket-fences, carts full of rose-buds, tapiary trees, and a gazebo.

Couples swayed to the fabulous music of "The Swinging Professionals" of Raleigh.

The combination of orchestra, refreshments, and scenery provided Juniors and Seniors, faculty and staff, chaperones and guests a night of recreation and enjoyment that will not soon be forgotten.

The 1969 CIRCLE represents the work of a small group of people over a long period of time. Somehow, somewhere, this handful of dedicated workers came to feel an obligation to this school, to this yearbook and to themselves. Without the efforts of these students and a wonderfully understanding sponsor, this book would still be on the office floor.

But the story of the 1969 CIRCLE is not just a story of hard work and sacrifice - it is also a tale of great joy and satisfaction that comes only when one sees the fruition of his efforts.

The CIRCLE staff is proud of its contribution to this book, and to this school, and hope that you will be also.

Student Council

Reaching toward their goal of establishing and maintaining leadership, followership, and democracy among the students, the Student Council inaugurates projects which emphasize school spirit and participation in school-sponsored activities. The Student Council strives to represent the ideas and needs of every student. Through this body, each student has an opportunity to take part in student government.

When the CIRCLE went to press, class representatives had not yet been elected to serve on the Student Council.

After jumping off to a sizzling start, the Bulldogs seemed to gradually decline. With the loss to powerful Warrenton, the morale swung temporarily upward. A tie with Oxford Orphanage was disheartening, but the backbreaker came with the loss to Wakelon. Afterward, The Bulldogs dropped five straight, including the last game in which Thomas Finch made a brilliant first half appearance. Several Bulldogs placed on all-conference selections and Thomas Finch again repeated as an all-state performer.

Varsity, J. V. cheerleaders support teams

Head Cheerleader Marilyn Stewart encourages enthusiasm in the stands.

Working to improve their technique, the Varsity cheerleaders broke the silence around Louisburg during summer practices. A week at camp in August put the girls in shape for the first game. Hours of tedious work were spent before each game making posters and badges. Keeping in mind their goals of promoting school spirit, the squad artistically decorated the goal posts with blue and gold streamers at each home game. Headed by Marilyn Stewart, the cheerleaders cheered the Bulldogs through victory and defeat. Anticipation mounted when the girls switched to basketball chants. Under the supervision of Mrs. Evelyn Williamson, the group spiced up their yells and performed pom-pom routines to the rhythm of the LHS pep band.

J.V. CHEERLEADERS: ROW 1 - Ellen Frisbie. ROW 2 - Valjean Cooley, Ellen Pernell, Suzanne Beckham, Tanya Wiley. ROW 3 - Penny Nash.

In addition to their support at all athletic events, the cheerleaders completed several projects: selling booster badges; selling doughnuts; and selling candy for the Monogram Club. With willing hands and unique ideas, the Varsity cheerleaders sponsored the annual Homecoming festivities. By pep rallies and a year-round bulletin board, the girls encouraged interest and support for the Big Blue.

The Varsity cheerleaders were often assisted by the Junior Varsity cheerleaders. Led by Penny Nash, these girls did their share of promoting school spirit by cheering at the JV football games. Together these two squads have done an extraordinary job of boosting team morale and school spirit throughout the year.

Girls basketball team has busy season,

Rita Patterson, captain of the Louisburg Girl's team.

The Louisburg girls basketball team, coached by Mrs. Margaret Hobgood, has broken the ice. When the CIRCLE went to press, the girls had won two ball games. Predictions are that the girls will be better as the year and future years progress. The team, made up of some sharpshooting underclassmen, which will be back, make the fans look forward to the upcoming years. Always fighting hard, the girls have still fallen short of a winning season, but winning is not everything, and the girls have a lot to be proud of.

Lou Merritt follows the ball, as the rest look on. Practice is essential, and the girls never seem to get tired of it.

Bulldogs follow rugged schedule in '69

CO-CAPTAINS: Matt Person, Thomas Finch

The Louisburg High School basketball team faced the difficult task of rebuilding its team. With four starters and four players on the bench graduating, the Bulldogs are having a rough time. Also, the Bulldogs are placed in a conference with three teams that are in the top twenty-five in the state. Showing good shooting and ball handling, the Bulldogs have made superb efforts, which barely lacked the talents for a winning season.

Captain Thomas Finch pops through the opposition for an easy shot.

Robby McDonald finds the going tough as he tries to get off a shot against Norlina.

Closely guarded, Thomas Finch searches for a friendly jersey.
